White Poppies

Explanation

Poppies are flowering plants in the Papaveroideae subfamily of the Papaveraceae family, especially species of the Papaver genus. This plant is widely found in the northern hemisphere (subtropical region) and some of its species are cultivated as ornamental plants. Poppies are herbs that are commonly grown because of their colorful flowers. The leaves are oblong with serrated edges. Poppies usually have long stems and stick out from the ends of the branches.
